The Participant’s Curse and the Perception of Unequal Treatment

Kevin Roberts

Department of Economics, Oxford University

This version: January 2007

Abstract

If participation is subject to congestion externalities then, conditional upon participation, the returns to activities are less than suggested by an unconditional valuation of returns. This phenomenon is investigated in general terms, and with respect to markets and auctions.

JEL Nos: C72, D21, D43, D44

Keywords: Participation, congestion, entry, markets, auctions

Corresponding author: Kevin Roberts, Department of Economics, Manor Road, Oxford, UK. Tel: (0044) 1865278601; Fax: (0044) 01865278621; e-mail: kevin.roberts@nuffield.ox.ac.uk