Introduction

William Cobbett was born in Farnham on March 9th 1763 and died in Normandy, Surrey on June 18th 1835. He married Ann Reid in February 1792. Cobbett was a radical political journalist and also an passionate farmer. He was a strong advocator of parliamentary reform, which eventually led to the 1832 Reform Act after which time Cobbett was elected to Parliament.

The papers of William Cobbett listed here were received from several sources at different times. A large proportion of the papers originated from G.D.H. Cole's personal library, which was purchased in the 1950s whilst Colonel W.O. Cobbett and Messrs. Faithfull of Winchester (Cobbett's solicitors) also deposited papers in the collection.

Researchers may find M.L. Pearl's bibliographical account¹ of Cobbett's life of interest, because it lists those items that G.D.H. Cole had collected. References to Pearl's bibliography are given in this handlist, where appropriate, and appear in square brackets e.g. [269].

| XXX/78/1-2 | 21.2.1820
London | Letter from JMC to Mrs Cobbett

All in the paper about Coventry is true – convinced that he will succeed – “effect produced by me at Coventry surpassed anything that imagination can reach” - all friends extremely kind – wished him to publish ‘The Little Blue Smock Frock Address’ – this produced prodigious effect all over country – has today sent letters to Ellice – in a few days will send another address for the women – fears nothing but ‘downright bribery’ & does not think that will succeed against his pen & tongue – doubts as Member for Coventry to give his vote to Baring (which he does not much like, but which is better than a vote for the ‘little dirty villain Fleming’ – tell the doctor to vote for Baring & not for that rascal chap – note from John M. Cobbett. |
| XXX/79/1-2 | 12.4.1820
London | Letter from JMC to JPC

Papa has failed in election – so ill-used by several persons that he will shortly be compelled to surrender himself – a report has been spread that he has an American estate worth 20,000 dollars.

London | Letter from [JMC?] to JPC (incomplete)

[Enclosed: 'Rule of the King's Bench' by Susan Cobbett?]

Seed business 'not actually a gold mine'. Nothing else is talked of but the Queen's affair. The Alderman [Wood] has brought the Queen over. The Alderman has only seen Cobbett once – he replied coldly to Cobbett's offer of help & to his request for information. Brougham was evidently selling the Queen, tried to avert public opinion by bringing forward 'his famous dame-school notion'; then became honest. Cobbett wrote some letters to the Queen but the Alderman & Lady Hamilton prevented her from seeing them. William Cobbett, Junior to see the Alderman, whose brother, to placate Cobbett said that the Queen wanted to buy back numbers of the Register. Cobbett has not yet seen the Queen, but "he has been the prime mover" – a letter to the King written by a person whom James knows very well but whose name must not be mentioned [i.e. Cobbett]. |

Brompton | Letter from [Anne Cobbett] to JPC (incomplete)

On Cobbett's bankruptcy. The Queen's affair removed attention from it & they were not 'plagued' as they had expected to be. The bankruptcy was determined upon when Buckland arrested Cobbett at Coventry for money lent to the Turnpike Road. Only £5000 proved before the Commissioners & of these £1400 was Brown's, £3000 [£300?] Tipper's, & £900 Roger's, all of whom Cobbett asked "to come and prove". Cobbett nearly died from eating too many peaches, but a few hours afterwards dictated part of a Register to Anne (The letter to the Weaver boys) which everybody says is best he ever wrote.
