Jonathon Riley was deployed as Deputy Commanding General of the Coalition Military Advisory and Training Team in Iraq in May 2003 and then became Commanding General Multi-National Division (South East), Iraq and GOC British Forces in November 2004 with promotion to major-general. In 2005, he was awarded the United States’ Legion of Merit for his service in Iraq.

Appointed deputy commander of the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan in 2007, General Riley was awarded the NATO Meritorious Service Medal by the Secretary-General of NATO. He retired in 2009 and has since been a visiting professor of war studies at Kings College London.

Dinner information

A limited number of places are available for dinner after each talk. Please send your application with a cheque (NOT cash) for £30 (£20 for full-time students of Oxford University) made out to Nuffield College to Claire Bunce, Nuffield College, Oxford OX1 1NF by no later than 3 working days before the event. Confirmation of dinner place or return of cheque before the dinner. At least one working days’ notice before the event is required for cancellation. NOTE: the dinner is available to those on the OIG mailing list only (ie receiving the notification directly from C Bunce).

Bids not needed from Group members not staying for dinner though notification, as above, is always welcome and helps the speakers.

Directions to the College, and a map, are available on the College website: https://www.nuffield.ox.ac.uk/the-college/contact-us/.
